NLP Master Practitioner Certification

This 6 day training runs live on Zoom, scheduled to be accessible in all North American time zones. In the Master Practitioner certification, a small group of participants goes through a rigorous process that uses the core skills of NLP to build confidence and commitment to your goals whatever your circumstances. You learn to identify, apply, or transform patterns of thought and behaviour more accurately and with more flexibility.

What is NLP?

Neurolinguistic programming (NLP) is a toolkit for learning, development and change. It was developed in the 1970s as a practical way to help people gain better choices about their states, goals and relationships. Training in NLP involves working through a series of exercises to improve awareness, develop new habits in thinking and communication, and set motivating goals.

At the Master Practitioner level, NLP is a toolkit for recognizing complex patterns of thought, emotion and action that can be stabilized, combined or changed in real time. A master recognizes opportunities in a situation and uses them to move relentlessly toward their intention for that situation.

Is Now the Right Time for You?

If you are thinking about the Master Practitioner course, this is probably the right time for you. People tend to "wait" until they feel they have already mastered the material in the practitioner course. It's better to trust your instinct and layer in the more complex techniques of the Master practitioner course as soon as you are curious about them. You'll gain the full toolkit and then practice until the use of the tools becomes second nature.

What Will You Learn?

The purpose of the NLP Master Practitioner certification is to develop the set of skills necessary to use different tools in combination to manage state and achieve intentions. Build out from familiar techniques to recognize and use more complicated patterns naturally and quickly.

Key Skills Developed

Self-Management	Awareness	Communication
Setting Intentions	Time and timing	Using frames & reframes
Using Intuition	Performing under pressure or adversity	Language of choice
Conditioned responses	How to take notes that widen the frame	Language of change
Changing habits	Modeling strategies	Stories as strategies

How Will You Learn?

The only way to develop skills is to practice, get feedback, and practice again. Expect this course to include a brief explanation of each exercise, followed by an opportunity to do the exercise (usually twice in different roles) and then include feedback on what worked before you move to the next exercise. We work live on Zoom and you will spend most of your time in a breakout space with one or two other people. We developed a schedule that keeps your attention fresh and focused throughout the day.

What Results Can You Expect?

During the course, people often experience some confusion. That's not a problem: it's a sign that they are quickly assimilating new thinking. As the confusion settles, people feel more confident and more motivated. Many people report that they become very busy and that they achieve things they have been putting off or things they expected to take much longer to achieve. People also report improved relationships, confidence and focus.
